

This year The Board has assigned Promo a fixed amount of money for attending events. While not low, we must be careful and selective on what events we will be spending this money on.

The overall annual budget for 2024 is as follows

- For FLOSS related events (FOSDEM, FOSSAsia, Linux Tags, etc.): 3000€
- For non-FLOSS related events (STN, events for educators, artists, etc.): 3000€
- Reserve funds for events we had not anticipated (see below), but are too interesting too miss: 2000€

We will be elaborating a draft list of the most prominent events in 2024 (in which everybody is invited to participate) and whittle it down to what we think reasonably can be funded given budget.

This is not a bad thing. It will give us focus and help us choose more carefully events we want to attend, and help define why we are going and what we want to achieve.

We have written down some guidelines on what would make an event an ideal candidate for being funded through Promo's assigned budget.

Take a look and see what you think:

Before the Event

The request will be accompanied by

- a list of valid promotional goals
  - Valid goals could include:
    - Collect details of principals and educational board members who would seem open to testing KDE software in their schools
    - Collect details of organizations/corporates that are willing to use KDE's software or collaborate
    - Broker collaboration deals with other communities to work on joint projects
    - Recruit new developers/development teams for KDE
    - Run workshops
    - Raise funds
  - Invalid goals could include:
    - Raise awareness
    - Hand out Stickers and merch
    - Deliver a talk that could be a blog post
- a list of materials that will help achieve those goals, including devices for show and demos (large screens, tactile screens, loudspeakers, microphones, mobile devices, "naked" hardware, etc.), devices to count and register the number of visitors to the booth, printed cards (if it is that kind of event), pen and paper (or their digital equivalents) to write down contact details, stickers, merch, etc.
- a list of activities that will help achieve the goals, such as demos, talks, workshops, etc.

During the Event

- Carry out the demos
- Actively engage with the audience (i.e. do not only let the audience go to you but actively pull them in)
- Document everything with photos and videos at all stages of the event if some can be later reused in promotional materials, so much the better. Make sure you ask for permission from subjects to publish their likeness. Get people talking on camera about their views, either candidly or in response to your questions.
- Take note of the number of visitors, most common questions and comments, most common activities visitors engaged in, etc.

After the Event

- Write a private post-mortem containing
  - A list of goals achieved and the next steps to be followed relative to each goal (e.g. "have a call with the XYZ organization/company", "email Ms. H G information", "Start sponsorship admin for the A company", "download info of G to Mr. K, head of the L school", etc.). The more specific the better.
  - a detailed description of the event
  - a description of the profile of the attendees
  - a description of the booth or talk and materials you took with you
  - a description of all the information you collected (except for sensitive personal details, like contacts of leads)
  - a description of what and how attendees interacted with you and your material, pointing out the most and least popular materials, merch, etc.
  - a "lessons learned" section

All these can be bullet points

- Write a blog post we can later include in the Annual report
- Transfer leads and other useful promotional information to the promo team
- Transfer recorded material (photos and videos) to the promo team

Denied events

All events that do not have a clear promotional value will be have to be denied, as budget is limited this year.

Important caveat

This does not mean you cannot attend an event and get funded! Many events have are valuable beyond being promotional, but then they you must not expect funding from Promo's overall annual budget.

You way forward will be to negotiate travelling, accommodation and other expenses with some other team, the Board itself, or cover the budget yourself.

Promo will still be able to provide free stuff if available, like leftover stickers, or banners, and advise on how to proceed.
